SPOTLIGHT ON THE SAINTS

By Bob Rawson

Saint Hildegard of Bingen

Saint Hildegard of Bingen was an Abbess, artist, author, composer, mystic, pharmacist, poet, preacher, and theologian—how does one begin to describe this remarkable and most recent female Doctor of the Church?

Hildegard was born of noble parents in Böckelheim, Germany in 1098. She was educated at the Benedictine cloister of Disibodenberg for ten years by Blessed Jutta. Hildegard was 15 years old when she began wearing the Benedictine habit and pursuing a religious life. She succeeded Jutta as prioress in 1136.

Having experienced visions since she was the age of three, at age 43 she consulted her confessor. Her confessor ordered her to write down the visions that she had received, Hildegard took ten years to write her Scivias (Know the Ways).

A committee of theologians confirmed the authenticity of Hildegard's visions and a monk was appointed to help her record them in writing. The finished work, Scivias, consists of 26 visions that are prophetic and apocalyptic in form and in their treatment of such topics as the church, the relationship between God and humanity and redemption. About 1147, Hildegard left Disibodenberg with several nuns to found a new convent at Rupertsberg, where she continued to exercise the gift of prophecy and to record her visions in writing.

Hildegard's visions caused her to see humans as "living sparks" of God's love, coming from God as daylight comes from the sun. Sin destroyed the original harmony of creation; Christ's redeeming death and resurrection opened up new possibilities. Pope Eugene III read it in 1147, and encouraged her to continue writing. Her Book of the Merits of Life and Book of Divine Works followed.

A talented poet and composer, Hildegard collected 77 of her lyric poems, each with a musical setting composed by her. Her numerous other writings included lives of saints; two treatises on medicine and natural history, reflecting a quality of scientific observation rare at that period; and extensive correspondence, in which are to be found further prophecies and allegorical treatises. She traveled widely throughout Germany, evangelizing to large groups of people about her visions and religious insights.

Between 1152 and 1162, Hildegard often preached in the Rhineland. Her monastery was placed under interdict because she had permitted the burial of a young man who had been excommunicated. She insisted that he had been reconciled with the Church and had received its sacraments before dying. Hildegard protested bitterly when the local bishop forbade the celebration of or reception of the Eucharist at the Bingen monastery, a sanction that was lifted only a few months before her death.

Pope Benedict spoke about Hildegard of Bingen during two of his general audiences in September 2010. He praised the humility with which she received God's gifts and the obedience she gave Church authorities. He praised too the "rich theological content" of her mystical visions that sum up the history of salvation from creation to the end of time.

Her earliest biographer proclaimed her a saint, and miracles were reported during her life and at her tomb. However, she was not formally canonized until 2012, when Pope Benedict XVI declared her to be a saint through the process of "equivalent canonization," a papal proclamation of canonization based on a standing tradition of popular veneration. Later that year, Benedict proclaimed Hildegard a doctor of the church, one of only four women to have been so named. She is considered a patron saint of musicians and writers.

During his papacy, Pope Benedict XVI said, "Let us always invoke the Holy Spirit, so that he may inspire in the Church holy and courageous women like Saint Hildegard of Bingen who, developing the gifts they have received from God, make their own special and valuable contribution to the spiritual development of our communities and of the Church in our time." As one of the few prominent women in medieval church history, Hildegard became the subject of increasing interest in the latter half of the 20th century. Her writings were widely translated into English; several recordings of her music were made available. Her liturgical feast is celebrated on September 17.
